The Case of Jayden

Jayden liked school, but always got in trouble for getting up and moving around in his high school class. He would tap his pencil on the desk when he was reading, and when doing his assignments at home he liked to walk around.

He did not like to follow instructions on assignments, but preferred to just get started and do the work. This caused some problems for him because he sometimes missed important parts of the assignments.

Jayden is now taking classes online. He wants to get his degree and earn more money.