Review the article that you selected for your Unit 4 and Unit 6 Assignments. Think about the implications of the issues the article raises for a larger academic audience and for your Unit 9 Assignment, write an academic essay that in some way responds to the issue that the original article raises.

You could explore an implication or issue that the original article does not address, or you could disagree with the original author's point of view about this issue and establish your own. Or you may choose to explore the larger implications of this issue (does this issue have implications for changes in the field of study, should this be an issue that deserves more attention in the academic community, or should this issue be incorporated into a school's program to improve students' knowledge about the field, for example).

This essay should demonstrate your ability to write a formal document that addresses an academic audience of your instructor and other professionals in your field. Make it your goal to ultimately publish your paper in a journal professionals in your field read and rely on for knowledge and current information. The paper must also demonstrate the ability to incorporate and cite at least 2 additional reliable, secondary sources appropriate to academic writing.

Length Requirements: Your assignment should be the equivalent of 2 and 1/2 to 3 double spaced pages.
